Mar. 11, 1927.

Mrs. Samuel H. Sibley,
Marietta, Ga.

My dear Mrs. Sibley:

Some two or three months ago I promised to send you the emblematical meanings of the Collier Court of Arms as appeared on the card I left with you, which I herewith enclose.

We had Tiffany & Company of New York City, and also a Mr. Hunchback of England, Staffordshire County, to get up for us the right Court of Arms for our family. They submitted the one that you have and the one that appears on my card.

After a careful examination and making a thorough search in England it was concluded that the one appearing on my card was the one belonging to the family of Robert Collier, the old English citizen of the 16th century, and was likewise used by his son, John Collier, a London merchant.

I am glad to have had the pleasure of knowing you personally, and I expect to be again in Marietta during the Spring and will then do my best to call on Mrs. Tate, your sister.

If any of your family happen to come through Barnesville, we would appreciate having you stop by and see us.

Kindly pardon a dictated and type written letter.

With very kind regards, I beg to remain

Yours most respectfully,

JCC:S

J. C. COLLIER.

Enc.